Mark Johnson

On Monday, November 18, 2019, at 8:30 p.m., the Barron County Sheriff's Office received a report of a one vehicle accident at the intersection of Hwy 25 and Hwy A south of Barron.

Early Thanksgiving in the Island City by Mark R. Fuller

The event that we call Thanksgiving was first celebrated by the Pilgrims after their first harvest in the New World in October of 1621. The three-day feast was held by individuals, who were accustomed to celebrating a military victory, the end of a drought, or a good harvest. Although continued off and on over the next 200 years, it would become a national holiday in 1863, when President Lincoln called for a day of thanksgiving and praise during the Civil War.

Once the new settlers began to make Cumberland their new home, this celebration of Thanksgiving became an annual event in the Island City.

The early Advocates of the 1880's, would run full-page articles about the national holiday each November. The paper would include some general history of the day and a short fictional or non-fictional story involving the celebration. An 1885 Advocate also included an article called, "Thanksgiving Games." Its purpose was, "To show how young folks and their elders could be amused after dinner."

Among the games offered were "Queen Anne's Dead", "Ship's Arrived", "Come ye Come", and "Simon Says Thumbs Up". Each would provide the family an opportunity to sit together, following a great meal, joining each other in a fun activity. The article said, "Nothing more productive of hilarity can be imagined than Queen Anne's Dead."

Food was found everywhere. A November 22, 1894, Advocate called for people to sign up at the Hotel Cumberland, where a Thanksgiving dinner would cost 50 cents a couple. It also advertised F.E. Dille's City Bakery, where fresh Thanksgiving oysters could be ordered at 40 cents a quart. The same Advocate wrote, "Bring in a turkey to the paper before Thanksgiving and get a years subscription." The cost for a year of the Advocate in 1894, was $1.50 a year.

For those wanting to cook their own turkey, they could purchase a live one from Pettit and Briggs. An 1885 Advocate announced their market had, "A Fine lot of turkeys alive or dressed." They were located across from the school house.

For those eating too much, the Advocate also offered solutions. An ad for "Kodol" said the liquid could, "Cure indigestion, dyspepsia, and all stomach trouble by cleansing and sweetening the glands of the stomach."

Some others used Thanksgiving to do some shopping. An 1885 Advocate advertised Chinchilla Overcoats for $5.00 and $10.00, while "Waterman's and Purtells Store" had dry slabwood for sale at $1.25 a cord. Shrimskis was another store in town calling themselves,

"The headquarters for cash bargains." They advertised their winter caps as "Cheap, cheaper, and cheapest."

A Church service on Thanksgiving could be easily found. An 1893 Advocate summarized that years holiday by saying, "Thanksgiving was duly observed in the city. Union Church services were held and business generally suspended for the day. There was an old-fashioned prayer meeting in the evening, which was well attended. The donations for the poor were generous and all felt they had much to be thankful for."

It was not uncommon for the people here to reach out to those less fortunate. Besides the collections for those in need, in 1885, the Catholic Church held a Thanksgiving oyster meal at Miller Hall free of charge.

Like today, some would spend part of their day deer hunting. An 1895 Advocate described the upcoming

Honoring a Hero

When Paul A. Shockley, an Air Force Veteran, passed away on November 4th, he left no family, and few friends to cover the costs of a funeral. When Tami A. Inman-Stoker, Assistant Barron County Veteran Service Officer, heard of Paul's plight, she jumped into action. Sending word to area VFW's, American Legions, and media outlets that this veteran deserved our respect, and asked for anyone who could, to attend and give Paul a proper funeral on Friday, November 15th at the Veteran's Cemetery in Spooner. The response was overwhelming. Parking over flowed, cars lined all available drives, and when the cemetery filled to capacity, speakers were set up on the lawn for the standing room only crowd (bottom). Thanks to everyone who answered the call to show respect for this (almost) forgotten hero.

Coaching resignations/hirings on agenda of November School Board meeting

The Cumberland School Board held their regular meeting on Monday, November 18th.

The action items for the evening all involved personal approvals.

The Board regretfully approved the resignation of Carroll Schell as Girls' Golf Coach after 15 years of service. The Board thanked him for his time and commitment to the program.

Also approved were the resignations of Tanya Majewski's as Head Cross Country Coach and Taylor Marschall's as Assistant Middle School Cross Country Coach.

Numerous coaching positions were approved that night. Joe Waite will be stepping up to the plate again as Head Baseball Coach.

Waite will also be sharing the Middle School Boys' Basketball Coaching duties with Mike Dietrich. Mike will coach the 7th graders and Joe the 8th grade team.

Lastly, Randy Bielmeier was approved as Head Softball Coach.

The employment of Brent Sellent for the Custodial/Light Maintenance position was also approved. After training, Brent will take on the night custodial position.

Jamie Shaffer, Director of Curriculum, gave a run down on the District Accountability Reports (State "Report Cards"). The District's overall rating is "Exceeding Expectations." One of our strongest areas of improvement was in the "closing the gap" category. The Elementary School led the individual school scores with a grade over 77%.

The next regular meeting of the School Board will be on Monday, December 16th at 6:00 p.m. at the District office.

ing season, which included buck, doe, or fawn. Running from November 1 to November 20, the paper added that no dogs could be used by rabbit hunters during that time frame and nothing could be shot in water or on the ice. Twenty people would be shot in Wisconsin that deer season. The paper also prepared the hunters for the worse saying, "Deer in these parts are scarce and anyone who captures one is in great luck."

Finally, in those early years, the conclusion to Thanksgiving often included an evening dance in Cumberland or in an area dance hall.

The November 22, 1894 Advocate advertised a "Thanksgiving Ball" to be held at Miller's Hall. The entertainment would be Gilmore's Orchestra at a cost of $2.00 a couple. Similar dances were held at Nelson's in Barron, the R. Miller Hall in Comstock, and in Barronett. For those looking for something a bit different, you could attend a Thanksgiving Masquerade Ball in Turtle Lake for $1.25 a couple, which included supper.

With schools closed Thursday and Friday, the kids of the city enjoyed short break, while the School workers had time to prepare for the upcoming school days. A December 6, 1894, article told the Advocate's readers that "The school building and blackboards had all been cleaned."

For many in town, it was quickly back to work on Friday. An 1893 Advocate announced that with an early ice of, "eight to ten inches," it was perfectly safe for teaming horses on the areas lakes. That being said, the Beaver Dam Lumber Company announced they would be hauling logs again on Friday."

As you can see, back then as well as today, there was much to be thankful for in Cumberland.

Eye Facts from Jacobson Advanced Eye Care

CARING FOR YOUR EYES IN COLD WEATHER
 What you wear when you go outdoors changes with the temperature and climate of each season and your eyes are no exception. Just as you need to rethink your wardrobe as temperatures fall, you should also rethink how you care for your eyes. INDOOR HEAT AND FORCED AIR from car vents dries out eyes just as it dries your skin. A humidifier may help this condition. If you wear contacts, you can try rewetting drops specifically labeled for contact lens wear. THE SUN may feel hotter in the summer, but with winter snow, UV can be twice as dangerous. You want to make sure your sunglasses block 100% of UV rays. Check the labels or bring them in and we'll check them for you.

Opinion

By Craig Bucher

Well, my dream went half bust. The Gophers, still with the big win over Penn State in their heads, went belly up in the first half against Iowa and could not come back. The Vikings saved the day, after duplicating the Gopher first half, came back to post a much needed win. The Pack enjoying a bye week, are waiting and the Badgers, who hammered Nebraska, are just a game behind the Gophers in the Big 10 race. It will be an exciting end to the football season with both the Badgers and the Packers coming to Minneapolis for vital games. Stay tuned!!

I hope everyone is paying attention to the impeachment hearings now being held. There is gavel coverage on all of the major television networks. It doesn't make any difference if you support President Trump or not. It is a citizens duty to be informed. The 2020 election is coming close and it will impact the direction of the country for the next 20 years. An informed electorate is important to making good decisions and we need to make good decisions in the 2020 election. Benjamin Franklin, before the men who were gathered at the Constitutional Convention, were to sign the Constitution creating a new United States, said that we have created a Republic "if you can keep it." We have managed to keep it through two world wars, several devastating depressions, elected presidents of many political stripes and a horrific civil war. Here we are, I believe, at a similar place of crisis. What we decide in 2020 will have a profound effect on our children and grandchildren. Every bit of education we get will help us make a better decision in 2020. I urge you to watch the hearings.

SEE YOU NEXT WEEK!

LETTERS Editor

Letter of Appreciation

To the Editor,
I'm writing to tell you how much I enjoy the articles Mark Fuller writes about Cumberland's past. The train article was very interesting. I lived in Cumberland when I was a kid. After I left, I've lived in Illinois, California, and Connecticut, now Georgia. I've always had a subscription to the Advocate.

It's so nice to read about Cumberland when you're far from it. My parents were John and Delores Haley and they lived in Cumberland the rest of their lives. My family still has members living there. I just wanted to say thank you.
Sincerely, Becky Haley McGiffin

Inside Wisconsin

by Tom Still

Are Janesville and Monona, Wis., the center of the fusion world? They may well be MADISON, WI - Greg Piefer and his company are on the verge of being one of the world's biggest suppliers of a radioactive isotope that is used 40 million times per year in health care.

The company, SHINE Medical Technologies, just landed a $50-million funding round from a global investment firm. The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission recently accepted an incredibly complicated "operating application" from SHINE, which means the firm could begin production of the isotope within a few years if all continues to go well.

As if that's not enough, SHINE and a related Wisconsin company, Phoenix LLC, set a world record this summer for the strongest nuclear fusion reaction within a controlled, steady-state system.

I know what you're thinking. Nuclear fusion is one of those scientific Holy Grails that seems forever just out of reach, even viewed by some skeptics as the 21st century of alchemy. Fusion is what powers the sun and would be the ultimate energy source if safely harnessed. However, doing so has largely been the stuff of science fiction for decades.

Until now. The Piefer-led team at Janesville-based SHINE and Phoenix, which designs and manufactures neutron generators in Monona, beat the world record for a controlled nuclear fusion reaction by nearly 25 percent this summer. SHINE and Phoenix ran a 132-hour test with more than 99 percent "up time" in July, yielding 46 trillion neutrons per second.

The reasons for doing so have everything to do with SHINE's goal of helping 1 billion patients over time by solving a looming shortage of the medical isotope, molybdenum-99. That isotope is now produced only at conventional nuclear reactors outside the United States, most of them on the verge of being decommissioned due to their age.

By demonstrating its ability to churn out neutrons that are used to safely create Moly-99, which deteriorates into Technetium for medical testing purposes, SHINE and Phoenix are proving the process will work reliably while generating the supply of isotopes needed to keep medical tests humming.

"This demonstration proved, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the machine we've built can produce enough isotopes to justify a business case for large-scale production," Piefer said.

Saving and improving lives by creating a reliable supply of medical isotopes should be a big enough goal to satisfy anyone. Piefer, a Brookfield native who holds a Ph.D. from the UW-Madison College of Engineering, wants more.

"The reason I went to graduate school was to make energy from fusion," Piefer said. "I absolutely plan to continue my life working on fusion energy."

He comes by that desire naturally, having learned from engineering physics researchers at the UW-Madison that included the likes of Gerald Kulcinski and Harrison "Jack" Schmitt. Schmitt was one of last two astronauts to last walk on the moon in 1972. He is a geologist who brought back a combination of moon rock and dirt loaded with helium-3. That helium isotope could be used to produce clean fusion reactions - if the science advances far enough to do so.

For Piefer, the SHINE-Phoenix demonstration was a step toward achieving the fusion energy goal, but by beating modern-day swords into plowshares.

Piefer envisions using material from nuclear weapons, mixed with uranium from the ground so the combination is no longer "weapons-grade," and bombarding the mixture with neutrons through a steady-state reaction.

He described the July demonstration as "a stepping stone toward advancing fusion for other, more ambitious applications, including the recycling of nuclear waste and ultimately the creation of cleaner, safer and more abundant energy."

For now, SHINE is focused on producing isotopes that can be used to help diagnose heart disease and the staging of cancer - no small undertaking. In time, however, Piefer will reach for the elusive "grail" of clean, limitless energy that fusion could provide.

"The biggest, steady-state fusion site in the world right now is located in Janesville, Wisconsin. Who would have thought it?" Piefer asked.

Almost no one would have imagined it, but Piefer and his team are making it an unexpected reality.

Danielle R. Hagen, 21, of Cumberland, has been charged with theft, and not to commit any new crimes in violation of bond in Barron County.

On Saturday, November 9, Officer John Smith with the Cumberland Police Department, was dispatched to Louie's Lodge in Cumberland, for a report of a theft that occurred on November 7.

Officer Smith reports he met with the manager at Louie's, and she advised she had been looking at closed caption surveillance cameras due to suspicious behavior that occurred at Louie's Lodge. She states that an employee informed her that when he arrived and opened the store, he noticed the sign was already on and that the padlocks on the ice chest were missing.

The manager viewed the security camera footage and observed a female who was dropped off in the Louie's parking lot at approximately 7:15 A.M. The business doesn't open until 8:00 A.M., which is clearly listed on both doors of both stores. The female was looking around the ice machine in front of Louie's and then was looking in the window on the front door of Louie's. The female then headed north towards Louie's Lodge.

The video surveillance footage showed the female walk up to the window of Louie's Lodge and look in, mess with the extension cord, look inside the ice machine for a long time, and then proceeded to take the padlocks from two ice machines on the outside of Louie's that were unlocked and put them in her pocket. The female looked behind the ice machine for a long time, plugged in the open sign, and then knocked on the door of Louie's Lodge even though the business was closed. The female appeared to wave at the camera and then left the front of the store, heading to the north again.

The manager stated she did not recognize the female and posted the video on facebook hoping to identify the person.

Officer Smith reports he viewed the surveillance footage and immediately recognized the female as Hagen.

Officer Smith reports Hagen is seen on the surveillance video looking around the area and looking at the ice machines. The manager informed Officer Smith that the two ice machines have padlocks on them but on this particular day the padlocks were unlocked. Hagen can be seen on the video footage taking the two padlocks off the ice machines, latching or closing them so the lock and putting them in her pocket. Hagen remained in the area for several more minutes looking in the windows before walking away from the area.

If convicted, Hagen be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than nine months in jail or both.

Michael W. Rust, 39, of Cameron, has been charged with attempt aggravated battery to an elderly person, disorderly conduct, domestic abuse, and resisting/obstructing an officer.

Officer Jeremy Anderson, with the Cameron Police Department, reports on October 17, he was dispatched to a residence in Cameron for a report of a disorderly. Barron County Dispatch advised Rust had been arguing with his father and had pulled a knife on him and was going to stab him. While en route to the residence, dispatch advised Rust had left the house traveling on foot and still had the knife with him.

Officer Anderson reports that as he drove by the Cameron Community Center, he observed a male which matched the description of Rust, sitting on the front steps off of Main Street at the Cameron Community Center. Officer Anderson approached the male and asked if he was Michael Rust. The male who was hunched over did not answer. Officer Anderson observed the male holding a knife.

Officer Anderson drew his duty weapon and ordered Rust to drop the knife. Rust refused to do so. So Officer Anderson began walking backwards to create distance between himself and Rust. As he did, he continued to order Rust to drop the knife. Rust did not, and Officer Anderson requested emergency assistance from other responding units at his location.

Officer Anderson started a dialogue with Rust. Officer Anderson asked Rust to calm down and put the knife down. The defendant told Officer Anderson that he would "have to shoot him." While speaking with Rust, Officer Anderson observed a superficial cut on Rust's neck and observed that his left wrist was bleeding, both injuries were self-inflicted.

Deputy Schill, with the Barron County Sheriff's Department, arrived and grabbed his shotgun that he loaded with bean bags. Sgt. Graf, also with the Barron County Sheriff's Department, arrived and was ready to employ lethal force if necessary. Officer Anderson trained his taser on Rust. Sgt. Graf informed Rust that he needed to drop the knife. Rust refused to do so. Officers then explained to Rust that if he did not drop the knife, he was going to be hit with bean bags, and possibly tased. Rust then dropped the knife onto the sidewalk in front of him. Sgt. Graf moved up to Rust and kicked the knife away.

Officer Anderson reports that Rust refused to cooperate with officers when they attempted to take him into custody. Sgt. Graf, Deputy Schill, and Chief Ambrozaitis with the Chetek Police Department, and Officer Anderson forced Rust onto the ground, face down, before they were able to place handcuffs on him.

Officer Anderson reports that he interviewed Rust's father, and Rust's mother. They allowed Rust to live with them, rent free, while he saved up some money to get his own place to live.

The father stated that on October 17, Rust began arguing with him while he was in the living room watching TV. The father went into his bed-

Boys Basketball Team Begins Practice

The Cumberland Boys Basketball Team opened up practice on Monday in the high school gym. Corey Berghammer returns as Head Coach with high expectations for the season.

Returning players include three starters from last seasons 17 and 5 team. They include First Team All-Conference selection Noah Schradle and Second Team selection, Jack Martens. Ethan Sandman is the third starter returning, after averaging eight points and five rebounds a game as a Junior.

Schradle had a big season last winter averaging 15.2 points and five rebounds a game. He finished third in the HON in scoring last season.

Martens, meanwhile, finished fifth in the Conference in scoring at 14.8 points per contest. An excellent outside shooter and strong defender, he will join Schradle as two of the top players in the conference as the Beavers look to contend for this years HON Title.

"We are looking to these three guys to provide leadership and scoring, especially early on, until our other kids get more comfortable with the speed of varsity basketball," said Coach Berghammer. A fourth player, Sam Schradle, saw about 15-20 minutes per game last year and should move into another starting spot.

Other kids who will vie for varsity minutes include Matthew Friess, DaShaun Ames, Josh Martens, Michael Cecka, Travis Runberg, and Evan Knutson.

Cumberland looks to have good numbers with players out for the team in the mid-30's. "We will have three levels of basketball again this year, and have the highest participation numbers since I have been coaching," added Berghammer.

He concluded by saying, "We will be focusing on playing intense and relentless defense, and playing unselfish and smart basketball on offense." The team opens up on December 3 in a home contest against Cameron.

Ania Hyatt (center) signed her National Letter of Intent to play college volleyball at Northern Michigan University on Friday, November 8th. Hyatt is a member of the 1000 kills club as well as First Team All Conference (twice) and being named All Region. Congratulations on a great High School career and good luck at NMU! Elk were reintroduced in the Clam Lake area in 1995 and have also been reintroduced in Jackson County. Over 200 elk are now estimated in the Clam Lake herd. Congratulations on harvesting a magnificent animal.

The Crossbow Dilemma

Hello friends,

This week's column will come out just before Wisconsin's deer gun season opens, and my guess is that it will start a few conversations at deer camps throughout the state.

Until this fall, I have never given a moment's thought to using a crossbow to hunt whitetail deer and this past October, I had something happen on the final day of an eight-day bow hunt that has me doing some thinking.

I was in a tree on a remote canoe, hunting and camping trip, it was 22-degrees and a good buck offered me a 12-yard, broadside shot.

I had been in the tree for about an hour and a half and thought I was totally fine. I was just about half-way back on my draw at a buck that had no idea of what was happening when something in my shoulder locked up and for maybe five seconds I could not pull my bow back any further.

The buck did not figure out what was happening but realized something was wrong and casually left the area.

I am 58-years old and I can take pain, cold, and fatigue. Not much scares me and I did not miss a morning or afternoon in a tree on that adventure.

That night I was cooking my dinner in my tent and I was reading Midwest Game and Fish which is an excellent outdoor magazine. I just happened to read that during the 2018 hunting season, crossbow hunters in Wisconsin harvested 46,750 whitetail deer while vertical bow hunters took 40,055.

The job I have as an outdoor writer in the newspaper industry has me all over Wisconsin on a weekly basis, generally living out of a tent and chasing just about anything that flies, swims or runs.

I was never comfortable shooting over 28-yards at a deer with my bow while on a platform 15-feet up in a tree. Now for the first time in my life, I am starting to think that at least in the cold season I may take up hunting deer with a crossbow.

I have noticed both young and older hunters are taking on an energy for hunting, or as in the case of many of the guys and gals over 50, they are hunting deeper into life.

Again, I want to stress I had given owning and hunting with a crossbow zero thought until that experience with the buck, but now I think about all of the young kids that cannot pull back a vertical bow. I think of all the folks with some form of health issue where pulling a vertical bow back.

I think about hunting in November and December and how many more opportunities a hunter would have to hit the woods.

As long as you can only harvest one buck whether it is with a vertical bow or crossbow, I think in a time of declining outdoorsmen and women in the woods, making it legal to hunt deer with a crossbow is good for just about everyone

Playing the devils advocate, I have been having this discussion with plenty of hunters that have made the switch and some of them tell me the thrill is gone!

For myself, I eat venison at least twice a week for the last 58-years and I love it. My game has always been making it hard on myself whether it is living out of a canoe, sleeping on the ice or working with an empty wallet.

If I make the switch, I will keep playing hardball with myself and have a blast with the crossbow.

Enjoy your deer camp and try to be open minded!

No matter what your quarry, hunting with a bow and arrow is a satisfying way to spend time.

DNR Encourages Hunters to Test Deer for CWD

CWD Sampling Locations in Place for Barron, Bayfield, Burnett, Douglas, Polk and Washburn Counties

In cooperation with local businesses, CWD sampling options are available to hunters across northern Wisconsin in 2019. Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources staff will collect deer heads for disease detection surveillance in an effort to determine if and where CWD occurs on the landscape.

Hunters who harvest an adult deer in Barron, Bayfield, Burnett, Douglas, Polk, and Washburn counties are strongly encouraged to submit a sample from the deer for CWD testing at sampling locations within those counties [PDF]. CWD testing is free of charge to the hunter, and anyone submitting a sample should receive test results typically 10-14 days after the deer is brought to a sampling station.

The health of the deer herd relies on commitment from hunters. Managing CWD begins with knowing where the disease exists on the landscape, and having this knowledge is only possible with a robust sample size. Please make plans to visit one of the following sampling stations to have your deer submitted for testing.

"We're grateful for hunters making that extra effort to have their deer sampled for CWD, and to support them, we continue to make access to sampling simpler, faster and easier each year," said Tami Ryan, acting Wildlife Management bureau director. "Each deer sample is important because it contributes to an accurate understanding of the health of Wisconsin's deer herd."

CWD Sampling Locations

Hunters have several options available to have their deer sampled for CWD, and all locations can be found on the DNR website. In addition to a network of 24/7 self-service sampling stations (also called kiosks) around the state, many meat processors and businesses offer in-person sampling assistance. Some sampling locations also have DNR Wildlife Management staff available to take samples and answer hunters' questions.

Hunters should contact staffed sampling stations in advance to verify hours of operation. For an interactive map with sampling locations available in your area, visit dnr.wi.gov and search keyword "CWD sampling." There is also a searchable database available as an alternative to the map view.

A limited quantity of CWD self-sampling kits is also available at the Spooner DNR Service Center. These kits have all supplies necessary to collect a CWD sample, including a detailed instruction packet and prepaid return envelope. Hunters interested in a self-sample kit can pick them up during regular service center hours.

A sample consists of the deer head with 3-5 inches of neck attached. Hunters will also need to have their harvest authorization number, harvest location and contact information when submitting a sample. To make special arrangements for large bucks, please call a local DNR wildlife biologist.

Deer Carcass Disposal

Hunters are encouraged to dispose of deer carcass waste in a licensed landfill that accepts this waste or in a dumpster designated for deer carcass waste. If a municipality allows deer disposal curbside or at a transfer station, the carcass should be double bagged. If these options are not available and the deer was harvested on private land, burying the deer carcass waste or returning it to the location of the harvest are the next best options. Hunters can find a map with the CWD sampling locations and deer carcass disposal locations on the DNR website as well as in the Hunt Wild app.

Baiting and Feeding

Hunters are reminded that baiting and feeding is prohibited in some counties. Check the DNR's baiting and feeding webpage frequently for updates. No counties in the state will be removed from the ban during the 2019 deer hunting seasons.

Prevent the spread of CWD

Voluntarily following recommended practices can reduce and prevent the spread of CWD. Those include proper carcass transportation, handling and disposal, also reporting sick deer, following baiting and feeding regulations and cleaning and decontaminating equipment. Hunters may also follow urine-based scent recommendations.

Sick deer reports
 DNR staff members are interested in reports of sick deer. To report a sick deer, contact local wildlife staff or call the DNR's Customer Service hotline at 1-800-847-9367.

Test results

To view CWD results for a harvested deer, visit DNR website. Hunters will need to enter a customer ID or CWD sample barcode number to view test results. The average turnaround time from when the deer is brought to a sampling station to when the results are available is typically two weeks.

If test results come back positive for CWD, advice from the Centers for Disease Control. Wisconsin's Department of Health Services and the World Health Organization is for hunters not to consume venison from that deer.

More information regarding CWD in Wisconsin, is available on the DNR website.

Jack Martens

Jack Martens Named First Team All-State

Cumberland Junior Jack Martens has been named by the Wisconsin Football Coaches Association to their Small School All-State Football First Team for the 2019 season. He joins Palmyra-Eagles Danny Hammond, as the two players receiving wide receiver berths on the honor team.

Martens had an outstanding junior season as he led the State in receptions with 94 catches for 1190 yards and 13 touchdowns. He also showed his versatility by being a tough runner and an excellent defender as a two-way starter on the Beavers 8 and 2 team.

Martens was honored by his selection but added, "It is a team honor I could not have received without the contributions of my teammates."

Wrestling Team Has High Expectations

The Cumberland Wrestling Team opened practice on Monday with high expectations for the 2020 season. The team opens up with a Conference dual against Barron on December 5, before hosting their annual Dual Competition at the High School on December 6.

The Beavers return as defending HON Conference Champions and Coach Isaac Lundquist returns numerous strong wrestlers off last years team. They include Bennett Schram-ski, Blake Siebert, Milan Monchilovich, Josh Simon, Devin Roff, and Braxdyn Engstrand among others.

Schramski, Monchilovich, and Siebert finished runners-up in their individual weight classes at last February's Conference Championship, while Schramski went on to participate in the State Tournament in Madison last March. Each will form a nice trio of experienced wrestlers to lead this years squad.

Northwoods Notebook: Longtime family businesses are about those who stayed By Larry Werner

I was getting my teeth cleaned last week by a dental hygienist who said she grew up in Duluth and couldn't wait to leave as soon as she graduated from high school. Now, however, she realizes her hometown is a pretty nice place, and she expects she might go back some day.

That conversation provoked thoughts of my decision to leave my hometown in Michigan, never to return, except for visits, and regrets I feel when I go back to a place larger than, but not unlike, Cumberland - old, ethnic and on water that gave the town its identity. In the case of Bay City, Mich., it was the Saginaw River where we fished, boated and played, along the shores of which downtown businesses were built. In Cumberland, of course, the defining body of water is Beaver Dam Lake.

The Saginaw River divides my hometown. Beaver Dam surrounds the place I spend most of my time now. And there are many who return to live in The Island City, often after retiring from careers done elsewhere, and many, like me, who left their hometown and never will return.

Then there are those who never left, like Tom Toftness. Tom recently celebrated 40 years treating people with bad backs and other ailments, just as his father and uncle did before him, starting in 1932, when his uncle, I.N. Toftness, started Toftness Chiropractic where Cumberland Federal Bank now stands. Tom did leave for chiropractic school in St. Louis, but he returned to the town where he grew up. There are only a few such businesses in Cumberland, multi-generation family businesses.

Tom mentioned Skinner Funeral Homes and Jacobsen Advance Eye Care. Bill Skinner has followed in the business footsteps of parents Bob and Pat, and Jennifer Jacobson Turcott has succeeded her father, Lee Jacobson, in the downtown optometry business. When you succeed a parent as a business owner you get to stay put in the place where you grew up, where you fished and swam on summer days as a kid and got your first dozen years of education.

My father was a truck mechanic. He had no business to hand down to me. So I left for professional opportunities with newspapers in Detroit, Buffalo, Dallas and Minneapolis. In retirement, I ended up in Cumberland and like it just fine, even though it's not home.

In the Nov. 6 Advocate, you might have read the obituary of Delores Zappa Ytreus. She died at her home in California, where she and her husband settled many years ago, after she graduated from Cumberland High School and left. She called me a few years ago and told me I was lucky to live in her hometown, which she missed terribly.

I agreed that I was fortunate to have found a home on Beaver Dam, to have a place where the kids and grandkids love to visit on summer weekends and where I have made more friends than I did during 30 years in the Twin Cities.

Tom Toftness wasn't sure he wanted to follow his father and uncle in the family business. After two years of junior college, he and a buddy took a trip around the country. When he returned, he enrolled at UW-Green Bay. After eight weeks in Green Bay, he came home to Cumberland and told his father, Gordon, he wanted to be a chiropractor.

"My dad was very happy," Tom said.

So it was off to chiropractic college in St. Louis, then back to Cumberland, where he practiced with his father for 30 years. His father retired 10 years ago and died a few years later at 92. Tom will be 65 in January but has no plans to retire, even though, he said, most of his friends have retired. His son is a chiropractor in Jacksonville, but doesn't like snow and cold, so probably won't be the third generation to operate Toftness Chiropractic in downtown Cumberland.

Tom's secretary/receptionist, Julie Neurer, has been with him for 30 years, and Dr. Jody Griffith has worked in the clinic for 25 years.

"Now that I look back I think I'm fortunate to have lived here most of my life," Tom said over lunch at Peter & Annie's. "I got involved in theater, great golf course. Maybe we don't have all the big-city things, but it's a great place for me."

Tom Toftness, a good guy and good friend, is one of the few who grew up in Cumberland and stayed to run the family business.

As Delores Ytreus would say, you're one of the lucky ones, Dr. Toftness.

"I Will Create"
by Pastor Mike Brubaker
First United Methodist Church
"I Will Create..." Isaiah 65: 17-25

In this passage from the 'third' book of Isaiah we are reminded that the God of all creation was still in the creation business, and says, "I will create new heavens and a new earth... be glad and rejoice forever in what I will create." (Is. 65:17) This was welcome news to the exiled community of Israel. Even when they were allowed to return to the land of Judah, they were vassals to the Persian rulers. The destruction they had witnessed, their exile and the colonization of their land had left its mark on them. The social and political structure that had helped shape them as a nation was no longer in existence. So when they heard from Isaiah that the God who had created them was going to create a new heaven and a new earth they were glad.

The new creation, this 'new' Jerusalem, would be a place where the hungry are fed, the oppressed set free, there will be joy for the brokenhearted, and hope for the hopeless. "No longer will they build houses and others live in them, or plant and others eat... my chosen ones will long enjoy the work of their hands. (Is. 65: 21-22) If hope was going to be real for the exiled people, it was vital for them to hear God's voice and trust in God's promises. If our faith is going to grow so that we can live lives of hope, then we must also learn to listen for, and hear, God's Word and trust in the promises of God who is still in the creative business.

God creates in us a new life, a life of hope with a future that is beyond any we can even imagine. When we surrender our old lives, we receive a new one filled with God's love and peace. In his Unfolding Light blog titled Children of the Resurrection, Steve Garnaas-Holmes writes "The life you hand over is small; the life you receive is infinite... infinitely deep and wide. The infinite dimension of eternal life is not time, it's love." Infinite love!

God's new creation, God's kingdom is here and now, and it is only through us, the children of the resurrection, that others will come to see the promises of God are real. Our mission, as the body of Christ, is to make God's infinite love visible in the world by how we live at home, in our places of work and in our interaction with people in our community.

By Judy Pieper

The Hunters' Supper, hosted by Barronett civic club members this past Friday evening, was, once again this year, a huge success. Club members served stew in bread bowls and they were delicious. There were lots of people to visit with and it was a great way to spend the evening. If you missed it, don't worry. Club members will be serving the hunters' supper again next November before deer season.

Jim and Sue Worre called one day last week to invite me to lunch at the Red Brick Café. We had a great visit and great food. It was so nice to just sit, relax, and let Deb do the cooking and dishwashing.

We heard a good story before church Sunday morning. One of the members of Barronett Lutheran told us that a couple of his friends were out in North Dakota pheasant hunting a while back. As they were walking around trying to scare up some birds, they noticed a rather large hole in the ground. Being curious guys, they walked over and looked down into the hole and saw that, in the hole, there was a large bear, apparently down for his long winter nap.

Well, they really wanted to get some pictures of the bear, so they poked him a couple times. The bear slowly turned his head and looked at them, and they snapped a few pictures. You'd think that would have satisfied them, but not these guys. They really wanted to get some better pictures, so they poked him again. This time, instead of just giving them "the look," the bear came roaring out of the hole. Needless to say, the hunters ran for their lives and escaped unscathed. Thank goodness. One can only hope that they had clean clothing at the camp. Anyway, when they showed the pictures to the people at DNR, they were told that the bear would probably tip the scales at about 600 pounds. I think this story comes under the category of "let sleeping dogs lie," or "don't poke the bear."

And, speaking of the Dakotas, I have to tell you a joke that was in a brochure that we got when we went to the Ole and Lena dinner at Our Savior's Lutheran on November 2nd. Here it is -- Little Lena asked her dad, Ole, "What is your favorite rock group?" Ole scratched his head, thought about it for a long time and finally he replied, "I guess it's Mount Rushmore in South Dakota."

Peg Thompson gave me a story about her student days at Granite Lake School. She said that she remembered that the boys would all bring their toy guns and holsters to school and during recess they would all run around the school yard playing and shooting each other. The teacher, when Peg was in second grade, was very young, and she would also put on one of the boys holsters, take a gun, and play with the kids. Several times, it would happen, that she would forget that recess was over, and they would go on playing. Peg said that they really liked that teacher -- the School Board, though, not so much.

When I read that story to the friendly neighborhood moocher, aka Terry Goodrich, he said that he had many friends and acquaintances from Granite Lake School, and none of them became threats to the community because of the playground behavior during recess. Wouldn't it be nice to go back to those simpler times?

Lynn Thon had a houseful of young guests this past weekend. Her friends from Cornell, Brayden, Kayley and Alyssa, and their parents, of course, have moved to Rice Lake now and they decided this would be the perfect time to spend some time with Lynn. Other guests were Tru Lehmann, Kane Thon and Mary and Alex Anderson. Kaitlynn and Jessica Holmen were there, of course, because they live there. And Wrigley Marsh stopped by for a few hours on Friday evening. She has the patience of a saint. On Sunday morning she made donuts and let the little ones decorate them with frosting, miniature marshmallows, chocolate chips and all kinds of sprinkles. They had lots of fun decorating, and eating, the masterpieces.

One of the Red Brick Café regulars, Arnie, stopped by the other day with some jokes for the Barronett news. Here's one of them -- Question: What is a wave's favorite school subject? Answer: Current events.

This week I saved the best news for last. We have a new great-grandson!! Pierce Duane Thon, son of Garrett and Kandice and brother of Kane, was born at Rice Lake Hospital on November 5th. Mom and baby are both doing very well. Needless to say, he is absolutely one of the cutest little guys we have ever seen -- actually he looks just like Kane did when he was born. Kane, and the rest of the family, are absolutely thrilled with the new little bundle of joy.

I guess that's about all I know from Barronett. I hope you have a great week, and I'll see you next time.
